Part B. CV SUMMARY (max. 3500 characters, including spaces)

Antonio Gonzalez-Bulnes obtained the degree of Veterinary Medicine in 1991 and the PhD degree in 1997, at the UCM in Madrid, Spain. After postdoc stays at Spain and United Kingdom, he obtained a position of Researcher at the Spanish National Institute for Agricultural and Food Research (INIA) in 2001, in the first call of the Program Ramon y Cajal and was Científico Titular from 2006 to 2017. Currently, he is Investigador Científico and the Head of the Comparative Physiology Group at this institution. This group is specialized in the use of large farm animals (mainly sheep and pig) for research in nutrition, metabolism, reproduction, intrauterine growth retardation and developmental programming of health and disease. The research performed has been funded by MCYT, CICYT, OCDE and Medical Research Council of United Kingdom and its impact is determined by 217 SCI papers and 17 Doctoral Thesis. Currently, he also is Profesor Asociado at the Faculty of Veterinary Sciences of the Universidad Cardenal Herrera CEU. He is been actively involved in international collaborations, like member of the Managing Committee, member of the Steering Committee and leader of Working Group at the EU COST Action BM1308 "Sharing Advances on Large Animal Models". He is also a reviewer for different competitive funding bodies of the European Commission (AgreenSkills, Marie S. Curie), Spain (ANEP, AGAE, InnoCash), Argentina (ANPCyT-FONCyT), Chile (FONDECYT), Denmark (DFF – YDUN), France (ANR), Germany (DAAD), Hong Kong (HMRF), Poland (NCN), Portugal (FCT), South Africa (NRF), United Kingdom (BBSRC The Wellcome Trust) and Uruguay (CSIC). He is Academic Editor of PLOS One and Animals and reviewer for around 60 scientific journals. He is also actively working in Animal Welfare and Research Ethics, as Executive Secretary of the INIA Scientific Ethic Committee and Executive Secretary of the INIA Biohazard Committee from 2007 to 2015 and member of the Spanish Scientific Ethic Committee of Public Research Organizations (OPIs) from 2013 onwards.
